Near Vierzy, France, July 19, 1918, and before Blanc Mont, Oct. 3, 1918. Lieutenant McHenry led his platoon through heavy machine-gun and artillery fire until he fell severely wounded. On Oct. 3, 1918, while leading his platoon in the attack on the strongly fortified enemy position before Blanc Mont, he fell mortally wounded.
Navy Cross
For extraordinary devotion to duty, traveling two nights in order to take part in the action at Some-Py, France, October 3, 1918, after having been released from a hospital, although offered a detail that would have kept him out of danger he insisted on taking his platoon into the firing line. With disregard for danger he was well in the advance of the leading wave of his platoon when he was killed by enemy machine-gun fire.

War Dept Citation for Gallantry in Action
In the Bois de la Grande Montagne, France, Oct. 10, 1918.
While in command of Company F, 115th Infantry, and upon learning that one of his scouts was seriously wounded and lying exposed to enemy fire, he crawled forward under violent enemy machine-gun fire to the side of the wounded man. Being unable to move the wounded man without assistance he crawled back to the line, secured the assistance of a member of his company and returned with great difficulty to the wounded man and together with the help of the soldier carried the wounded man to shelter.
AEF Citation for Gallantry in Action
For gallantry in action October 9, 1918, in establishing and holding a line of resistance against a superior force of the enemy.
29 Div Citation for Gallantry in Action
Displayed remarkable courage and leadership, October 8th, 1918, in the fighting east of the Meuse, when he led his company in the face of heavy machine gun and artillery fire, in order to protect the flank of his regiment which was being turned by attack.

Distinguished Service Cross
At Bois-de-Consenvoye, France, Oct. 26, 1918.
Upon learning that one of the officers had been wounded by enemy fire and lying in an exposed position, Captain McNicholas left his post of command at battalion headquarters and with complete disregard for his own safety made his way through concentrated enemy machine-gun, rifle, and artillery fire, found the wounded officer and carried him to a place of shelter within his own lines. The bravery and devotion to his brother officer displayed by Captain McNicholas greatly inspired the men of his battalion.

79 Div Citation for Gallantry in Action
On the night of October 12th, 1918, while a sentinel on post, Pvt. Mehle showed gallantry and devotion to duty in an action against a German patrol. He allowed the officer who led the patrol, and the patrol, file by near his post, then opened fire, killing the patrol leader. He remained at his post and by his fire with the automatic rifle, repulsed the patrol.

French Croix de Guerre (Palm)
During the attack of October 8, 1918, he took command of the battalion and displayed great courage during the entire action. Wounded and slightly affected by gas, he refused to be evacuated, returned to his post of command and carried personally some important messages. Later he took command of a company and led it under fire.

Distinguished Service Cross
At Courban, France, July 14-15, 1918.
After the members of his telephone detail had been pressed into service as runners under a hostile bombardment so severe that telephone communication could not be maintained, he volunteered to drive an ambulance. He made three trips under terrific shellfire to evacuate wounded from Greves Farm.
French Croix de Guerre (Bronze Star)
Under a violent bombardment he replaced an ambulance driver who was wounded, in order to evacuate seriously wounded French artillerymen of the 1st Battalion, 214th Regiment, French Field Artillery, during the night of July 14-15, 1918, thus giving an excellent example of decision and courage.

57 Inf Brig Citation for Gallantry in Action
During an enemy attack in the early morning hours of August 21, 1918. Displayed coolness and excellent judgment under exceedingly trying circumstances, although fully one half of his platoon were killed or disabled by enemy barrage fire, which fell directly in the trench occupied by them, he rallied the remainder of his men and drove the enemy raiding party from the trenches.

Distinguished Service Cross
He displayed unusual courage on the morning of June 6, 1918, near the Bois-de-Belleau, when he established a dressing station in the open, exposed to both shell and machine-gun fire, in order to be near the wounded. Under these conditions he worked for several hours.
Navy Cross
For extraordinary heroism on the morning of June 6, 1918, in displaying unusual courage under heavy shell fire, when he established a dressing station in the open, exposed to both shell and machine-gun fire. Under these conditions he worked for several hours evacuating a large number of men from the 5th Regiment of Marines, then attacking in the Bois de Belleau. These services were performed regardless of personal consequences.

French Croix de Guerre (Silver Star) Employed at brigade headquarters in administrative duties, he volunteered, during the difficult attacks from July 22 to August 1, 1918, to maintain the infantry liaison in the most advanced lines. On July 30, he discovered the emplacement of enemy machine guns by advancing under their fire, and directed the fire of our own artillery upon them. On July 31, he repeated this achievement with the same spirit, and he himself brought back to a safer place an infantry officer who had been wounded beside him.

Distinguished Service Cross
Near the Cote-de-Roches, France, Oct. 8, 1918.
When the advance of the battalion to which his company was attached was halted by heavy machine-gun fire, this soldier boldly leaped to the top of his machine-gun emplacement to draw the enemy fire and thus enable his crew to locate the enemy's emplacement. Later in the action he fearlessly left his trench in search of an enemy sniper, who was causing many casualties among our troops and killed him with a captured German rifle.
French Croix de Guerre (Palm)
On October 8, 1918, when the advance was hindered by a fire from machine-guns near Roches Hill (la Cote des Roches) he stood up on the parapet to attract the fire of the enemy while he and his comrades thus ascertained the location of the position. They then rushed it and captured it and turned the guns on the enemy.

Wounded slightly 9/26/18 and severely 9/27/18
Distinguished Service Cross
Near Montfaucon, France, Sept. 27, 1918.
Though wounded on Sept. 26, 1918, he remained with the attacking lines of his regiment, ministering to the dying and aiding the wounded. After entering an enemy trench with a group of men, a grenade was thrown in their midst, and, in utter disregard of personal safety, he grabbed the grenade to throw it from the trench. It exploded just after leaving his hand, seriously wounding him in several places.

Navy Cross
For exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service in duties of great responsibility as Embarkation Officer at the port of Southampton and subsequently as Embarkation Officer at the port of Liverpool, England, in 1917 and 1918. In both these positions his performance of duty was conspicuously able under conditions of great difficulty. By unsparing application to the work, and by tact, sound judgment and ability he secured and maintained the cordial cooperation of the British Military and Naval authorities, working jointly with him in the successful accomplishment of the important task of handling, without loss or mishap, some three-fourths of a million American troops through the United Kingdom to English Channel ports, for further transfer to France.
AEF Meritorious Service Certificate
For services at Base Section Number Three, England, American Expeditionary Forces.
British Distinguished Service Order (Companion)

AEF Citation for Gallantry in Action
For gallantry in action near Cunel, France, October 8, 1918, while leading a combat patrol which returned with valuable information.
3 Div Citation for Gallantry in Action
He showed exceptional personal heroism, leadership, and initiative on July 22nd, 1918, near Franquet Farm, France. His Company protecting the flank of the Battalion, was flanked on both sides, by strong forces of the enemy. By his inspiring example he maintained great steadiness in his Platoons and accomplished his mission.

Distinguished Service Cross
Near Verdun, France, Oct. 8, 1918. In the Bois Consenvoye, east of the Meuse River, when his platoon was stopped he voluntarily advanced in the face of direct machine-gun fire, and was killed. His gallant conduct was a great inspiration to his comrades, who, following his example, captured the machine-gun nest, approximately 100 prisoners, and several machine-guns.

Special Letter of Commendation
He performed meritorious service as Chaplain at Marine Barracks, Quantico, Va., where he was indefatigable in his work for the welfare and morale of the personnel of the Post. Through his regular religious services and his ready, wise and helpful council and guidance, he was one of the most potent factors in maintaining discipline and contentment amongst both officers and enlisted men.

Distinguished Service Cross
In the Bois-de-Belleau, France, June 6-8, 1918.
He was conspicuous for his judgment and personal courage in handling his company in attacks against superior numbers in strongly fortified machine-gun positions. His fortitude and initiative enabled his command each time to achieve success.
Navy Cross
In the Bois de Belleau, France, June 6-8, 1918, he was conspicuous for his judgment and personal courage in handling his company in attacks against superior numbers in strongly fortified machine-gun positions. His fortitude and initiative enabled his command each time to achieve success.
AEF Citation for Gallantry in Action
For gallantry in action October 3-9, 1918, near St. Etienne on the Champagne Front, and for brilliant leadership.
2 Div Citation for Gallantry in Action
These officers led their companies with conspicuous ability and good leadership to their final objective in the Argonne sector November 1, 1918, and personally supervised the organization of their new line under shell and machine gun fire.
French Croix de Guerre (Silver Star)
Thanks to his fine qualities as a leader, his courage and his bravery, his company valiantly supported the ordeal of an eight day battle near St. Etienne-a-Arnes, October 3-9, 1918, and contributed brilliantly to the success of the operations in which it took part.

79 Div Citation for Gallantry in Action
During a raid on our front line positions by a battalion of the enemy which had been preceded by 1½ hours artillery barrage, this squad of men held their positions under this heavy fire in the open, and by their rifle and automatic rifle firing, repelled the raid against them.

On October 14th, Captain Ober, in company with Captain Verner A. Welte, was on observation and liaison work with the infantry which they were supporting north of Cierges. The infantry was under continuous shell-fire and several infantry patrols were fired upon. One wounded soldier was lying in front of the infantry trenches. Both officers of the regiment suggested that this soldier be brought in, but for some reason this was not done and at the risk of their own lives, both officers left the trench and rescued the wounded infantryman.

On the afternoon of October 13, 1918, was directing the barrage of Battery "B", 314th Field Artillery, at the battery positions North of Nantillois. In the course of the barrage the battery was spotted by a German aeroplane and fire opened by the German battery with which the aeroplane was working. The first enemy shell which fell made the accuracy of the German adjustment obvious to all at the battery position. In spite of this fact, he continued to direct and encourage his gun crews. The example of his bravery and coolness inspired his men to forgetfulness of their own danger and a better performance of their duties.

These men are recommended for bravery and devotion to duty for establishing and maintaining a visual signal station on the northern edge of Bois-de-Foret. Although subject to heavy artillery fire, they remained at their post in order to communicate with patrols along the Meuse, during the period from October 28, 1918, to November 5, 1918.

79 Div Citation for Gallantry in Action
Commanded an automatic gun team on the morning of September 22, 1918, in an advanced outpost position, and came under heavy shell fire caused by the enemy's barrage preparatory to a trench raid. He, by his coolness under fire, and retaining control over his gun squad, and the efficient direction of the fire, tended greatly to assist the outpost line in repelling this raid.

Distinguished Service Cross
Near Medeah Ferme, France, Oct. 8, 1918.
Gassed several times and his gas mask and pistol clip shot from his belt while going through a barrage, he continued to lead his company forward to its objective. He continually took and held first-line positions and repulsed several counter-attacks. When the commanding officer of his battalion was cut off by the enemy he organized the battalion and held off repeated counter-attack the while greatly outnumbered and fighting on three sides.
French Croix de Guerre (Silver Star)
On October 8, 1918, at the Medeah Farm, caught in a cloud of gas he stayed there with his men and led them to the victory. Attacked on three sides at the same time he lost touch with his battalion commander, reorganized his unit and captured numerous machine guns and withstood the shocks of three enemy counter-attacks.

Distinguished Service Medal
As commanding officer, Base Hospital No. 5, United States Army, serving with the British Expeditionary Forces at Dannes-Camiers and Boulogne, France, he displayed tireless energy and military attainments of a high order in the efficient operation of this hospital. By his marked devotion to duty and administrative ability great numbers of our own and Allied sick and wounded were treated, resulting in the saving of many lives. His services were of material value to the American Expeditionary Forces.
British Mention in Despatches
For gallant and distinguished services in the Field.

During the Meuse-Argonne Offensive, Lieutenant Pennington displayed utmost zeal and bravery as a platoon leader and exceptional ability in leading the men under his command in the attack on Murvaux November 5-6, 1918. Under intense enemy artillery fire he inspired his men by constant disregard for his personal safety and contributed greatly to the success of the engagement.

Distinguished Service Cross
Near Blanc Mont, France, Oct. 9, 1918.
After a withdrawal of the line had been made, he voluntarily crossed an open field under heavy fire to a small wood, where he located a number of wounded men, whose injuries he dressed, and directed their evacuation without further casualties.
AEF Citation for Gallantry in Action
For gallantry in action near Somme-Py, France, October 3-9, 1918, in supervising the evacuation of the wounded under terrific shell fire.
2 Div Citation for Gallantry in Action
On June 15, 1918, under heavy shellfire and at the risk of his life, he cared for wounded men in the midst of high explosive and gas shells. On the morning of June 29, 1918, while riding on an ambulance at high speed, the driver was killed by a shell, and Lieut. Pincoffs grasped the wheel, controlled the car and drove it to its destination, saving the lives of two men. This near Chateau-Thierry.
2 Div Citation for Gallantry in Action
Attached to 9th Infantry.
Under the most difficult conditions he continued ceaselessly to administer aid to the wounded. He directed the improvising of stretchers and the carrying of the wounded, constantly exposing himself, showing remarkable coolness and absolute disregard of personal danger.
French Croix de Guerre (Palm)
From October 2-10, 1918, he was constantly with the attacking companies directing the evacuation of wounded from the battlefield with the greatest coolness, under heavy artillery and machine-gun fire. Under all circumstances he showed complete contempt for danger, and gave a fine example to those about him.
French Croix de Guerre (Silver Star)
On June 15, 1918, under heavy bombardment, and at the risk of his life, he aided the wounded in a zone dangerously beaten by high explosive and gas shells. On June 29, in the vicinity of Chateau-Thierry, an ambulance driver having been instantly killed, he replaced him and carried the wounded to their destination, saving thus the lives of two men
French Croix de Guerre (Silver Star)
At the attack near Soissons on July 18, 1918, he displayed the greatest devotion and perfect coolness in helping the wounded under very difficult conditions and under a violent bombardment.

Near Soissons, France, July 19, 1918.
During the attack of his organization, after he had been severely wounded, Lieutenant Poe refused to be evacuated, but rejoined his organization and went forward to the attack through heavy enemy fire. The company commander being killed, Lieutenant Poe took command of the company and continued to direct it until the day's objective was reached. Although suffering great pain, he remained with his organization for more than 24 hours after he was wounded.
AEF Citation for Gallantry in Action

Near Bantheville, France, Oct. 23, 1918.

While patrolling the lines Lieutenant Quinn, with one other pilot, sighted and attacked four enemy machines (type Fokker). Several additional enemy planes joined the first four and, notwithstanding his great odds, he sent one machine crashing to the earth. Motor trouble forced him to drive straight through the enemy formation, and although followed and his machine badly damaged, he was able to outmaneuver and escape from his adversaries.

Distinguished Service Cross
Near Verdun, France, Oct. 9-12, 1918.
For extraordinary heroism in action near Verdun during the drive in which this regiment took part in the vicinity of the Meuse. He displayed great courage and presence of mind in attending to the wounded, not only of the organization to which he was attached, but also of those in adjoining organizations. The exceptionally valuable service performed by this soldier was done under heavy shell and machine-gun fire.

1 Div Citation for Meritorious Services
During the operations south of Soissons, July 18-22, 1918. Distinguished himself by his tireless and courageous performance of duty as regimental operations officer through the attack.
1 Div Citation for Meritorious Services
In the operations between the Argonne and the Meuse.
For the greatest efficiency in the discharge of his duties (as Operations Officer, 6 FA). He has at all times displayed the highest devotion to duty, untiring energy and zeal, and absolute loyalty. His example has been worthy of the best traditions of our service and of the First Division.

Distinguished Service Medal
He served with distinction as commanding officer of the 115th Infantry, 29th Division, at all times showing qualities of high military leadership and great tactical ability. Inspiring his men by his aggressive spirit and fervent devotion to his task, he led them with noted success through three weeks of constant action against the enemy during the operations north of Verdun.
French Croix de Guerre (Palm)
He displayed untiring ardor and energy in command of his regiment during a period of active operations against the enemy. Constantly in danger, he gave proof of the finest military qualities.

Killed in action 5/28/18
Distinguished Service Cross
At Seicheprey, France, March 28, 1918.
With great daring he led a patrol of our men into a dangerous portion of the enemy trenches, where the patrol surrounded a party nearly double their own strength, captured a greater number than themselves, drove off an enemy rescuing party, and made their way back to our lines with four prisoners, from whom valuable information was taken.
Oak Leaf Cluster
At Cantigny, France, May 28, 1918.
He conducted himself fearlessly to obtain information of the enemy's action. Although wounded, he volunteered to reconnoiter the enemy's line, which was reported to be under consolidation. While making a sketch of the German position on this mission he was under heavy fire, and continued his work after being fatally wounded until it was completed. The injuries sustained at this time caused his death.
1 Div Citation for Gallantry in Action
No specific citation.
French Croix de Guerre (Gilt Star)
They displayed the finest military qualities in entering an observation post of which they captured the garrison. Attacked by an enemy party, repulsed it, inflicting losses and brought back four prisoners.
